

N O M A D

by

Sacha Mitchell

v4.1 (working) - 2 August 2026 - Blue Sheep Films

EXT. ROOFTOP POOL, MEXICO CITY - GOLDEN HOUR

Paradise. A rooftop pool holding the last of the sun. String lights. A city below in warm haze, going on forever.

A MAN glides through frame into the water without a splash. Laughter somewhere. A phone buzzes on a towel and nobody reaches for it.

It looks like an ad.

SMASH TO:

EXT. OFFICE TOWER, TORONTO - MORNING - ONE SHOT

A blizzard, horizontal. Grey on grey on grey. One figure – WILL (late 20s), hood up, head down – crosses a parking lot in weather that has opinions, hauls open a lobby door against the storm, and is swallowed by a building the exact colour of the sky.

Classic GTA January. Enough winter to kill the spirit of even the most Canadian kid.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT - NIGHT

Sales emptied out in the spring. Nobody came for the furniture.

Half the floor is dark. In the lit half, a nine-hole golf course that used to be a sales department. A ramp made from a whiteboard laid over two file boxes. A water hazard that is a mop bucket. Hole 7 is the old CEO's office door, off its hinges, leaned against a dead desk. A Post-it on the wall says 7.

WILL, CAIRNS and JOHN (late 20s) – three men who should have gone home four hours ago – are playing it like the whole world is watching.

Cairns is filming it. Phone out, handheld, walking backwards through the course, narrating like a man defending a title.

CAIRNS

(to the phone)

Hole seven. The door. Nobody has birdied the door since it was a door.

JOHN

You're in the shot.

CAIRNS

I'm the coverage, baby.

He props the phone against a stapler on a dead desk – framing it, checking it, adjusting it half an inch – and forgets about it. Half of what it sees is carpet.

Will putts. The ball climbs the door, runs the length of the desk, and drops into a coffee mug on the far side.

A silence while all three of them work out that it went in.

Will shrugs. Taps the putter against the front and back of his shoe, the way a caddy does it on TV. That's the whole celebration. They've done this a hundred times.

Later. Backs against the cabinets, on the carpet, shoes off.

CAIRNS

Nine years I've been on this floor.

JOHN

Eight.

WILL

Six.

CAIRNS

(to the ceiling)

Nine years. You know what nine years gets you? A cubicle with my name on it. Spelled wrong.

(beat)

I put in a ticket in year two. Year four I stopped putting in the ticket. Year six I started telling people that's how it's spelled.

(beat)

That's the arc. Nine years of a guy slowly agreeing with a typo.

Nobody says anything for a second longer than they should. Cairns catches Will's eye across the carpet – a look that asks for backup. Will studies the ceiling instead.

Then John throws a golf ball at him and it's over.

Across the floor, one monitor still glows. TED'S desk. Ted has not been seen since March. His cardigan is still on the chair.

On the screen, a standup is in progress – 1:00 AM here, mid-morning for the Singapore office, says the clock in the corner of the call. Ted's face nods at the right moments. Agrees. Asks one good question.

Ted has not set foot on this floor since March. His calendar hasn't missed a meeting yet.

The three of them drift over and watch it the way you watch a nature documentary.

JOHN
Does anybody know?

CAIRNS
I heard HR renewed his parking pass.

On screen, Ted agrees with something.

WILL
That's the most he's said in years.

Later still. Ted's monitor glows across the dark floor, attending. Cairns can't stop looking at it.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
Say that thing does Ted's meetings for a year and nobody notices. Then one day it does yours.

WILL
It'd do mine better.

CAIRNS
Ninety-six point eight. That's your number, right?

WILL
(not proud of it)
Top human performer.

CAIRNS
So three point two percent of the time you'd let a fake sit in your chair.
(up on one elbow – the idea arriving)
We need a protocol.

This is how the game is invented, well past midnight, by three men who know how dumb it is. That is not stopping anyone. The rules assemble themselves in one pass: you can demand it anywhere, any time, no warning –

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
Prove it's you.

WILL

You cried at a car commercial. A
Hyundai. You said it was the song.

CAIRNS
It was a good song.

WILL
It was a Hyundai.

CAIRNS
Verified.
(wheeling on John)
Prove it's you.

John considers the question with enormous dignity, takes a full breath, and delivers – with total confidence – a fact about a man none of them has ever met.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
Out. You're out. Banned for life.

JOHN
(delighted)
I don't want it.

CAIRNS
You want it.

JOHN
I don't want it.
(three seconds; he cracks)
Your mug. Hole seven. It went in off the hinge and it sounded like a doorbell.

Nobody else on earth was there. Cairns points at him like a man who has won an argument.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
Verified.

JOHN
I want it.

WILL
The stuff nobody would bother to steal.

CAIRNS
That's the whole system. Costs nothing. Can't be beat.
(to Will, and he means it kindly)

Better than your numbers.

On the dead desk, the phone is still filming. Nobody has looked at it in an hour. It has all of it.

On the far side of the floor the lights click off on a timer. Nobody moves.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT - 3 AM

John's gone. The lit half is down to one bank of emergency strips and the glow off Ted's monitor, still attending.

Cairns and Will on the carpet, backs to the cabinets. The horsing around has burned off and left the thing underneath.

CAIRNS

Can I say a real one.

WILL

You've been saying real ones all night.

CAIRNS

Not like that.

(beat)

I signed already. Two weeks ago.

Will turns his head.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)

It's not the money, it's — okay, it's the money. I did the math on my life last month, properly, with a spreadsheet, like a psychopath.

(beat)

If I stay here I'm forty-one before anything changes. That's not a feeling. That's a cell.

WILL

So why'd you wait two weeks to say it?

CAIRNS

Because saying it out loud makes it a thing I did instead of a thing that happened.

Nobody says anything for a second longer than they should. This is the part where Will asks the next question.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)

Ask me.

WILL Ask you what.

CAIRNS
The thing. Ask me the thing.

Will looks at him. Something's off tonight and both of them can feel it, and one of them has a job that is precisely this, and it is 3 AM, and he's tired, and this is his friend.

WILL
Prove it's you.

CAIRNS
(immediate, and messy)
Grade twelve. Your mom drove us to Wonderland and I threw up on the – no, wait – I threw up BEFORE the ride, which is worse, and you told her it was me and she said "I know, sweetheart" like I wasn't in the car.

WILL
You weren't in the car. You were outside the car, being sick.

CAIRNS
I was ADJACENT to the car.

He's laughing. He's also not, entirely.

WILL Verified.

CAIRNS
(quieter, and it sounds like nothing)
Hey – do the thing sometimes. Down there. Even on a call.

WILL
Do what thing.

CAIRNS
The thing. Ask me.
(a shrug, already embarrassed)
It's stupid. I just like it.

WILL

You're going to be on a pool deck, man. You're not going to need a protocol.

CAIRNS
Yeah. No. Obviously.

He gets up. Stacks the chairs he isn't required to stack.

Will stays on the carpet, and lets it go, the way you let things go at 3 AM, and the lights on the far side click off on their timer.

MAIN TITLE: NOMAD

INT. OFFICE SPACE - CONTINUOUS - 2 PM

Daylight now. Same floor, same three men, still here – the night turned into a Friday and the Friday turned into a last day, and nobody has gone home in any sense that counts.

CAIRNS' last day. His desk is packed into a printer-paper box. On the box: three beers, sweating. Will and John flank him, drinking at 2pm like men getting away with something, because they are.

CAIRNS
(raising his can, to the empty desks)
To four incredible years. Truly.
Some of the best emails of my life.

Nobody looks up. Will and John do, and clink his can, and that turns out to be the number of people it takes.

A ROBOT BOSS – a monitor on a wheeled stand – comes around the corner at conversational speed, like a man who happened to be walking this way. The boss's face fills it: warm, attentive, always available. It has detected the beers.

ROBOT BOSS
Hey. Hey, guys. I'm not going to be the guy about this. I'm going to say the word "policy," and then I'm going to keep walking. That's all that's happening here. Policy.

CAIRNS
(hand to his heart)
Best boss I never met.

ROBOT BOSS
Ha! See, this floor. This floor gets it.

A half-beat late. The reprimand is gone, wherever dropped threads go. John and Will crack up.

Will's laugh catches for a second. He knows that lag — he knows it the way a piano tuner knows a flat note. He looks at the screen a moment too long.

Then he lets it go. It's a Tuesday. It's a joke.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - ELEVATOR BANK - CONTINUOUS

Will and John flank Cairns, carrying nothing. Happy for him. A little jealous.

CAIRNS

One fee, everything covered. Visa, apartment, the whole enchilada. You know what they call it? The nomad package. Like I'm a guy with a camel.

(loving it)

You know what my rent is down there? A phone bill.

(gesturing at the floor with the box)

I did the math on my life, and the math said leave.

WILL

Covered by who?

A gap, small. Cairns fills it fast.

CAIRNS

They've got people. It's a whole thing. This girl — rep — Michelle. She walks you through it. They even do three-month probationary terms. You hate it, you come home.

Neither of them asks who Michelle is. He has already moved on.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)

You should come. Both of you. I'm serious. Just come down and try it.

He says it like a joke, so that it can be one if they don't take it.

Nobody takes it.

The elevator arrives. Cairns steps in with the box, turns.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
Prove it's you.

WILL
Forty pesos says you never learn a word of Spanish.

CAIRNS
Verified. Next year. I'm telling you -

The doors close on him mid-sell. And the shot goes with him
- ONE SHOT, down through the floor numbers, doors opening on

INT. LOBBY - CONTINUOUS

- Cairns crossing the lobby, box under one arm, out through the double doors into

EXT. OFFICE TOWER - CONTINUOUS

- the blizzard, fully sideways now, where a yellow BECK TAXI idles at the curb with its trunk already open. Bags in. Door shut. The cab pulls into the white and is gone.

The building doesn't notice.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - THIRD-FLOOR WINDOW - CONTINUOUS

Will and John, foreheads nearly on the glass, watching the cab get eaten by the white. Two grown men at a window.

JOHN
He's going to be so tanned.

WILL
He's going to be insufferable.

JOHN
He's going to be tanned AND insufferable.

Neither of them moves for a second longer than the joke needs.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - MOMENTS LATER

Cairns' desk, cleared to the laminate - except for a branded welcome folder, left behind on purpose, squared to the edge to be found. And a photo, pinned to the cubicle wall: the three of them, mini-putt night, holding putters like a victorious army.

John eyes the empty chair.

JOHN
Shotty the chair.

He drops into it, gives it a spin, and wheels it away out of frame without another word. Will cracks up despite himself.

Will squares the welcome folder to the edge of the desk without deciding to. Neither of them opens it.

The photo stays pinned. Nobody takes the photo.

SUPER: ONE YEAR LATER

INT. / EXT. OFFICE - SEQUENCE - THE YEAR

The year, in the only way it registered: the same window, the snow leaving and coming back. Desks emptying one at a time – a chair, a monitor, a name plate into a bin. A screen of squares, cameras off, initials only. A parking lot filling less each month.

And Will, in all of it, going in anyway.

EXT. CITY - MORNING - MONTAGE

Will's entire commute. A bus window with weather on it. A transfer. An underpass. A parking structure. Not one pretty thing between his door and the office, and he has stopped looking for one.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - MORNING

The same floor, mostly empty. Motion-sensor lights click on ahead of Will in sequence – a runway for nobody.

He passes dark departments. Ted's monitor, still on, still attending. Cairns' desk, untouched, the folder gathering a year of dust. The photo of the three of them, sun-faded now.

At 8:55 the coffee machine brews a full pot. Will pours its only cup.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - WILL'S DESK - DAY

Will sits. Before the system gives him anything, it wants him: face to the camera, look left, look right.

INSERT - SCREEN

IDENTITY: LOW CONFIDENCE — RETRY.

BACK TO SCENE. He sighs, does it again. VERIFIED. Routine.

Then the work. A queue of faces — visa interviews, loan applications, insurance claims — each one flagged with a machine verdict: REAL or SYNTHETIC. Will is the human backstop. His job is to catch the fakes the machine misses and confirm the ones it doesn't. One button: APPROVE.

Will clicks. A streak counter climbs.

A face, machine-verified 98% REAL. Will stops. Replays three seconds — the man is asked about his childhood; his eyes go nowhere.

Will overrides: SYNTHETIC. The system concedes.

And there it is — small, private, the size of a coin: he smiles. Nobody in the world knows he was right except the machine that just admitted it, and that is enough. It has been enough for nine years.

The case file stamps itself: RETAINED FOR REFERENCE. Where the flagged ones go. He has never once asked where that is. His streak resets to zero. No one looks up.

On his monitor: SYSTEM 99.1 / WILL 96.8 — TOP HUMAN PERFORMER.

Later. The dashboard, a river of decisions. Will spots a fraud he's sure of. INTERVENE.

His screen dims. A coaching module auto-plays — "Trusting Your Tools," a cheerful presenter who blinks at perfectly regular intervals. In the corner, the system clears his case without him.

His screen blinks — an incoming call cuts straight through the coaching module. CAIRNS, poolside, sun, abundance.

CAIRNS

Willy Will Will. You're at the desk. I can hear the desk.

WILL

Yeah, yeah. Rub it in.

CAIRNS
 I'm going to rub it in.
 (turning the phone to the water, then back)
 Get your head out of the weeds,
 man. Sun on your face. Somebody bringing you a beer you didn't order.
 (leaning in, the secret)
 You know what I did this morning?
 Nothing. Took four hours. Not done.

Two GIRLS at the pool's edge, calling to Cairns, waving him in – one already in the water, splashing at him. To each other, between waves, dry, not for Cairns:

GIRL 1
 (in Spanish; subtitled)
 Watch. He'll tip me for this.

Cairns doesn't understand a word. Delighted:

CAIRNS (CONT'D)
 See? They love it here too. Anyway – you know I'm tight with Michelle. Say the word, you're set up by Friday.

Will hears something. Not in the words. Underneath them. An old reflex, a professional one, arrives before he can stop it:

WILL
 Prove it's you.

CAIRNS
 (delighted, instant, already wrong about it)
 Wonderland. Grade eleven. I threw up ON the ride –

WILL
 Twelve. And before.

CAIRNS
 It gets worse every year, that's how you know it's true.

Messy. Alive. Argued. It is the last time the story will ever be told wrong.

WILL

Verified.

The girls pull him from frame.

CAIRNS (O.S.) (CONT'D)
Love you, buddy!

The screen stays on. The three run to the pool. Cairns throws one girl in.

Will watches. A tinge of jealousy in it.

JOHN (O.S.)
Nice.

Will kills the tab and turns. John, holding six beers – for the two of them. He has his golfing glove on.

INT. DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT - MINI-PUTT COURSE - NIGHT

The lights are on. Hole 7 uses the old CEO's office door as a ramp.

JOHN
You know I've never even been out of the province?

WILL
Neither had Cairns.

JOHN
I'm just saying. Can't blame him.
(he putts; the ball misses everything)

He doesn't sound sure why he's still here. Will lines up a putt, then stops.

WILL
I think I'm leaning in the same direction these days.

JOHN
That direction being?

A half-second flat. Then Will grins.

WILL
Mexico City, baby.

They share a laugh. It mostly works.

WILL (CONT'D)

We're lucky to even have the option. Feels like a waste not to.
Over there I can live like a king.

JOHN
(lining up his own putt, not looking at him)
Find me a cute lil procesadora.

WILL
That's a food processor.

JOHN
Find me one of those too.

He sinks it. Neither of them mentions that he sank it.

Neither of them says anything else, and neither of them wants to badly enough to keep going.

Will sinks the putt. Doesn't celebrate. Somewhere else entirely.

INT. OFFICE SPACE - CONFERENCE ROOM - DAY

An all-hands. Two dozen chairs, nine people. The ROBOT BOSS parked at the head of the table.

On its screen: the boss in a crisp home office – good light, bookshelves, a coffee steaming at the same height it steamed a minute ago. Out his window, a gull crosses the sky it already crossed.

BOSS
(V.O., warm, unbothered)
So – as you've probably already heard through the grapevine, and honestly, good, I love that this floor talks – we're closing! Full remote by the new year. Genuinely so excited for what's next.

People start leaving after the first sentence. By the second, half the chairs are already pushing back – this meeting stopped being news to anyone but the boss a month ago.

A half-beat late, he raises the coffee like a toast. The feed freezes on his smile a second too long, then cuts.

Will counts the lag without meaning to. Four tenths.

Then: bad wifi, a satellite, a Tuesday. A hundred honest reasons, and he only needs one.

He picks one.

John's answer, announced to the emptying room: the last day in the office is the MINI-PUTT CHAMPIONSHIP. He starts the bracket.

On his way out, Will passes Cairns' dead desk. He stops.

He takes the welcome folder. He leaves the photo.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT - NIGHT

A facetime with family. His PARENTS, wind-whipped and grinning, at the top of an actual mountain – matching windbreakers, a summit marker behind them. Retired people having the time of their lives. The connection is terrible because they are somewhere better.

MOM

You're breaking up – say it again, sweetheart. The job?

WILL

The job's fine. The floor's closing, but the job's fine.

MOM

The floor's closing?

WILL

It's fine. I think I just want to try something different. New.

MOM

New like a girlfriend, or new like you've joined something?

WILL

New like a country, Mom.

MOM

(not missing a beat)
Which one? Your father will want to know about golf.

DAD (O.S.)

(behind her, to the entire mountain range)
I AM ON TOP OF THE WORLD!

MOM

He's been doing that since the parking lot.

The call ends first from their side. He finishes the sentence to a home screen.

He sits with it a second. Then his eyes go across the room.

On the counter: the branded welcome folder. A year of office dust still on it.

He looks at it for a long time.

INT. SERVICE STOREFRONT - DAY - SAME BLIZZARD

An office park drowning in the same snow. The Service sits between a v notary. Brochure rack, folding chairs, a paradise reel looping over a dying pothos.

On the rack, a brochure: SAME DOLLAR. THREE TIMES THE LIFE.

On the reel, a family laughs a half-beat late.

Will clocks it instantly, professionally – and files it where it costs him nothing. Everybody renders their b-roll now. Nobody flies a crew for a brochure.

A bored COORDINATOR checks Will in like a dentist's office.

COORDINATOR
Passport, please.

INSERT - PASSPORT

A scanner's green line crosses it.

BACK TO SCENE. Face capture: look left, look right, read this aloud.

WILL (mid-capture)
I do this for a living, you know.

COORDINATOR
(chewing gum, flat, entirely human)
Interesting.

COORDINATOR (CONT'D)
One more. For the file – describe your dream apartment. Take your time. They use this to curate your space.

WILL
(to camera, easy, unprompted)
High ceilings. Lots of light. A view. A patio – with a grill.
Simple. Clean.
(a beat; he surprises himself)
Beautiful.

The camera keeps rolling a beat after he's done.

Last station: a form on a tablet. The coordinator rotates it toward him without ceremony.

COORDINATOR
Likeness release. Promotional use.
Standard.

Will signs it the way everyone signs everything. Last initial, no flourish. The tablet chimes, pleased.

INT. WILL'S CAR - PARKING LOT - CONTINUOUS

The email arrives before he's out of the lot. MICHELLE – template-warm, exclamation points, a scheduling link. And a GIF of Michelle herself, shaking an off-screen hand on a loop, delighted forever.

He's still in the parking space. The wipers go once.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT - THAT NIGHT

Michelle's welcome preview: an automated ad starring WILL.
His face, his walk, composited into Cairns' paradise. "See yourself there."

He watches himself live the ad the way you watch any ad with your own face in it now – which is to say, it's Tuesday. Everybody's in ads. He says his name for the personalization anyway. Says it again, excited despite himself. Grinning.

INSERT - SCREEN

A checkbox fills: CONFIRM MY DETAILS. It plays his own face back to him – and for half a second his eyes look wrong.

BACK TO SCENE. His hand is on the scrub bar before he knows why. He drags it back. Watches the three seconds again. Then again, frame by frame, the way he has nine hundred times

this year for strangers.

He is one keystroke from the form he fills out for a living.

He closes the window instead. Compression. Everybody's compression is bad.

Later: forty minutes of a video about a man restoring a rusted wrench. It has nothing to do with anything. It is the best he has felt all week.

EXT. WILL'S BUILDING - DAY

A cab idles. Will's keys go into a lockbox in a lobby that used to have neighbours in it – left for a landlord he's never met.

John came to carry a bag. There's only one bag. Under John's arm: Will's putter, a strip of tape on the grip with WILL written on it in marker. He doesn't explain it. Will doesn't ask.

At the curb, neither of them makes a speech.

JOHN
Prove it's you.

WILL
Grade eleven. You told Marisa
Kovač you had a motorcycle.

JOHN
I had access to a motorcycle.

WILL
Your uncle had a motorcycle.

JOHN
That's access.

WILL
You have never been on a motorcycle.

JOHN
(a full beat, with enormous dignity)
Verified.
(beat)
Bring it back.

He means the game. Or Will. He doesn't specify.

And it's the SAME SHOT as a year ago – one take, out through the doors into the same blizzard, a yellow BECK TAXI at the curb, trunk open, one bag in. The cab pulls into the white.

John stands in the snow with the putter under his arm until the tail lights are a rumour. Then, because it is minus twenty and he is a person, he goes back inside.

INT. APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - DAY

No viewing. No agent. Michelle handled everything – the door unlocks from his phone on the first try.

High floor. Morning light. Fresh paint so recent the room still tastes like it. Will's one bag in the middle of the floor.

Somebody's mail is still in the slot. He sets it on the counter to deal with never.

Hanging his jacket, he swings the closet door – and stops. Inside the frame, where the painters missed: pencil marks. Small dashes, dates beside them, climbing the wood. A child's height, eleven years of it, ending mid-frame this spring.

The rest of the apartment has been painted twice. This one strip of a previous life got through.

Will looks at it for exactly as long as a person can afford to. Then he hangs the jacket over it.

High ceilings. Lots of light. A view. Out on the patio, left behind by whoever left: a grill.

It is exactly what he asked for, word for word. He said it once, out loud, to a camera in an office park.

He doesn't clock what that means. It's perfect. That's the thing about perfect – somebody builds it.

EXT. APARTMENT PATIO, MEXICO CITY - EVENING

Will, beer from a still-empty fridge, leans on his railing with the whole city laid out under him, lit gold. High floor. His.

He stands there like a man on a balcony in an ad – lord-of-all-this – and for tonight, honestly, it is.

EXT. MEXICO CITY - DAY

A market. Will haggles a vendor down over a bag of limes – forty pesos, nothing – and wins. Walks off delighted, and two stalls later hands a man triple for a coffee, and is delighted by that too, and does not notice these are the same delight.

He tries the Spanish for thank you. She says it back to him, correctly. He hears a compliment.

He texts Cairns. The reply is warm, specific, flaky – "in Oaxaca for a thing, next week for SURE, I already told everyone you're here."

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - NIGHT

A call with John. Nothing happens in it. That is the whole point of it. Will carries the laptop through the apartment – the ceilings, the light, the inherited grill. John's mouth is full. Behind him, the putter leans against hole 7.

JOHN

What've you got in there.

Will ends the tour at the fridge and shows him.

WILL

Limes. I won them.

JOHN

Living the dream, man. Any mamacitas?

WILL

(a beat too long)

There's a girl in the building.

JOHN

A girl in the building.

WILL

It's a big building.

It's the easiest either of them has sounded in a year.

JOHN (CONT'D)

(the last thing, thrown away)

You seen him yet?

WILL

Next week. He's in Oaxaca.

JOHN
He's been in Oaxaca since March.

A small silence, in two countries.

EXT. MEXICO CITY - ROOFTOP - NIGHT

On Will's phone, MICHELLE: "Building mixer tonight!!"

Everyone at the party is new. Everyone at the party is from somewhere colder. A software guy from Calgary. A woman who did claims in Rotterdam. Everyone got here through a Michelle. Nobody thinks that's the same Michelle.

A flicker of familiarity – the light, the pool, the shape of the night. Like a place he's already been sold. He shrugs it off.

At the pool's edge, apart from the party, a woman his age – LUCÍA (26) – sits with her feet in the water, working through a paper plate of food from no caterer Will has seen tonight, unhurried, picking it apart piece by piece like the night is long and belongs to her.

WILL
That's not from tonight.

LUCÍA
(not looking up)
No.

WILL
Where's it from?

LUCÍA
Four blocks that way.
(finally looking up, amused)
You want some. That's what this is.

WILL
I want to know what it is.

LUCÍA
Same sentence. Better manners.

She tears off a piece and hands it over without ceremony. He eats it. It is extraordinary. She watches him find that out and enjoys it more than the food.

LUCÍA (CONT'D)

Okay. What brought you here?

WILL
Work. Sort of. The – you know.
The math.

LUCÍA Mm.
(nodding at the party
behind the glass)
Everyone here says the math. It's the only Spanish any of you learn.

WILL
I'm learning.

LUCÍA
Say something.

WILL
(carefully, badly)
Gracias por... la comida.

LUCÍA
(giving it back to him, gently, correctly)
Gracias por la comida.

WILL
That's what I said.

LUCÍA
It really wasn't.

She saves the best piece for last, unhurried, playing with her food the way only people who have never once been in a hurry play with their food.

WILL
What do you do on Sundays?

LUCÍA
Eat for five hours. Nobody checks
a phone.
(beat – and she isn't being cruel)
You could come. You won't. But you could.

WILL Why won't I?

LUCÍA

Types "no worries." Sends that instead, and drinks both glasses, and it's fine. Everything down here is fine at volume.

EXT. MEXICO CITY - STREET - MORNING

Will, coffee in hand, hungover in a mild, imported way, walks a block he is starting to think of as his.

He passes two locals mid-conversation, subtitled for us – about the building on the corner that emptied inside a month. Eleven apartments, bought in a currency nobody here gets paid in. Nobody knows where the fourth floor went. The new ones are never home.

The building sits behind them, unremarkable. Will walks through the shot without hearing a word of it.

At the tail end of the block, a man on the curb. Gaunt, wrecked, talking – fast, urgent, to anyone who passes.

It's CAIRNS.

He is holding his cracked phone up to passing faces like ID. Whatever is on the screen, nobody stops for it. Nobody has stopped for it in a long time.

CAIRNS

(to nobody in particular, reasonable, almost gentle)

Ask me something only I'd know.
Anybody. Ask me anything.

The game. Their game – the whole system, costs nothing, can't be beat – begged at strangers on a curb, and the strangers don't know the rules.

He reaches – not quite toward Will, just toward the street.

And Will sees him. For one full second, Will sees him. The beard doesn't hide the face. Nothing hides a face from Will.

A second is a long time.

Long enough for a carpet at 3 AM. You'd be the one who could tell. Tell you what? Nothing, ignore me.

Then the reflex he has spent a year putting down puts this down too. Phone up. The camera passes across the man on the curb and offers nothing. Nothing worth stopping for.

Will steps around, and is gone.

EXT. MEXICO CITY - STREET - CONTINUOUS

Half a block on, stopped in the middle of the sidewalk,
Will types: "saw a guy today who looked exactly l" –

The reply lands before he finishes typing it. Warm.
Instant. "hahaha wild. OAXACA IS INSANE btw. next week for SURE."

He looks back down the block. The curb is out of sight from here. His feet keep it that way.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - DUSK

A voice note from John, played once and not answered: forty seconds of him doing an impression of the Robot Boss, then,
at the end, flatly – "call him from a different number.
Just, like, an experiment."

Will, at the counter, replies to Michelle's welcome thread.
Subject: MY FRIEND. He types it plainly – his friend came down two years ago, something's wrong, how does the three-month thing work, the probationary thing. How does somebody come home.

The reply lands in ninety seconds. Warm. Exclamation points. It answers none of it. There is a scheduling link, and the link opens a calendar with no available times, and under that, looping, delighted forever, the GIF of Michelle shaking a hand that isn't there.

He stares at the no-available-times for a long moment.

The elevator, a year ago: "You hate it, you come home."
Nobody ever asked who wrote that rule, or where the door was.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - NIGHT

The poolside frame. Cairns, still selling, still "next week."

CAIRNS

Just got up. Best sleep of my life down here.

Will, half asleep, barely thinking, runs the protocol.

WILL

Prove it's you.

CAIRNS

Wonderland. Grade twelve. I threw up before the ride, which is worse, and your mother said "I know, sweetheart," like I wasn't in the car.

Correct. Complete. Every clause in the right order – from a video shot on a dead desk at 3 AM by a phone nobody was watching.

Except the real one never got it right. It was eleven, then twelve. It was on the ride, then before. He argued about the car. The story moved every time he told it, because that was the point of telling it.

This one recited it.

Same laugh, 0.4 off. It slides back into the sell without a seam.

Four seconds of Will fully awake. His hand still up. The call does not end. It goes on, pleasantly – Will managing a goodnight.

CAIRNS (CONT'D)

I love you, man.

A half-beat late. Will closes the laptop and sits very still in the best apartment he's ever had.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - NIGHT - LATER

Desk lamp. Blue screen light. This is the room he works in, doing the thing he does.

Two video windows side by side. On the left, tonight's call, paused mid-laugh. On the right – a file John sent at three in the morning weeks ago with no message attached: a shaky phone video. The dead floor, 2 AM, a golf ball dropping into a coffee mug, three men losing it.

Cairns shot it himself, defending a course record, and framed himself out of half of it. It was never uploaded anywhere. It is the only footage of Cairns that was never for a buyer.

He drags them frame by frame.

A call Cairns swore he'd just woken up for: the light behind him is five o'clock light. On the far wall, reflected in the water, three pixels of a clock – wrong.

The laugh next. He isolates tonight's on a waveform, lays the 2am laugh above it, and plays them together.

They land like a flam – one drum hit, split in two. 0.4 apart.

He plays it again. Same 0.4, same place. He pulls laughs from other calls – weeks of them – and stacks the waveforms. 0.4. 0.4. 0.4. No human is that consistent.

Three windows now. Four. The desk stops being a desk and becomes the station he sat at for nine years – queue, evidence, verdict. He is doing to his best friend exactly what he did to strangers, and he is better at it than the machine ever let him be.

Then the thing he's actually hunting for. He runs the call metadata. Every message from Cairns – every call, for months – pings the same coordinates. Will drops them on a map.

One building. Twenty minutes away. He has the address because he found it.

INT. WILL'S APARTMENT, MEXICO CITY - NIGHT - LATER STILL

He calls John. It rings long enough that he almost hangs up.

WILL

The laugh's late. Point four, every time, same place in the laugh. Nobody's that consistent.

JOHN

(half asleep)

It's a bad connection, man. It's a resort.

WILL

I ran it against the video from the office. The one Cairns shot. The real one. And every call he's made in months comes off one rooftop. One building, John. Twenty minutes from me.

A long quiet. John, waking up properly now.

JOHN

So knock on his door.

It is exactly the wrong thing to say, and exactly what Will needed.

EXT. CAIRNS' BUILDING - DAY

From below. Monolithic. It fills the frame.

He doesn't have an appointment. He has an address, and nobody knows he has it.

INT. CAIRNS' BUILDING - DAY

Mid-morning – the lobby's dead, the front desk mid shift-change. Will slips in behind a delivery cart, badge-less, unremarked. Nobody's watching the door; the cameras are watching the residents.

One camera over the desk turns, without hurry, and follows him to the service stairs.

On a screen behind the empty desk, for nobody: a face box locks on. A readout he'd recognize anywhere, if he looked:

IDENTITY: WILL – MATCHED. REFERENCE ON FILE.

He doesn't look. The service stairs.

INTERCUT – THE DEAD FLOOR, TORONTO: John, 4 AM his time, awake, phone face-up on the carpet, watching a little blue dot that isn't moving. He has never been able to do anything from here. He stays anyway.

Upstairs: nothing. No set, no pool. An empty floor – chairs, capture rigs like the storefront's, racks of humming servers.

He knows this room. He has sat in the client-side version of it. He built reports off what rooms like this produce.

A fire door stands propped on somebody's cigarette break. Through it: the RENDER FARM.

An operator types a line. A poolside evening assembles in seconds – Cairns' pool, water that has never been wet.

On another screen, a girl who doesn't exist is thrown laughing into it. A slider drags her laugh warmer.

Along one wall, a rack of LOCATION PLATES – scanned, catalogued, resold. A rooftop. A string of bulbs. A city he was standing in last week.

Across the room, an operator clocks him in a doorway reflection. Doesn't stand, doesn't call out. Just glances at a screen that has been tracking Will since the lobby, taps something in, and goes back to work.

Will has perhaps four minutes. They were never his.

On one screen, mid-generation: WILL'S OWN welcome ad, refining. Him, poolside, saying things he's never said. The line about the high floor plays back, exactly as he gave it. At the bottom, boilerplate he signed without reading: LIKENESS RELEASE ON FILE – PROMOTIONAL USE.

In the corner of it, a readout he has looked at every working day of his life: WILL 96.8. Beside it, the model's number. Higher.

And then the worst screen in the building – because he hears it first, from the next row: his own laugh. The real one.

CAIRNS' LIKENESS on a call with WILL'S LIKENESS. Poolside together. Their in-jokes. Version numbers in the corner.

Will slips out. Nobody stops him. Nobody has to.

The fire door has swung shut behind him. No handle on this side.

He heads for the service stairs – and finds them held. Building security, apologetic, procedural: anyone without a resident badge gets verified before they leave. Standard, since an incident last month.

The main stairwell, then. The lift lobby. Every way down runs through the same desk, and the desk is the point.

He goes where they point. Nine years the number has been right about everyone else. He is still, on some level he will spend the rest of his life examining, certain it will be right about him.

INT. DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT - DAY / INT. VERIFICATION ROOM - DAY - INTERCUT

In the DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT: last day. The floor half-dismantled – desks tagged, cables coiled, the coffee machine unplugged. A paper banner sags at one corner. The bracket: most names never filled in, one crossed out and rewritten smaller – WILL (REMOTE?).

John, in a homemade referee shirt, by hole 7. Two other people, coats on, already leaving. Then just John.

Two beers. Will's putter leans against the hole, the tape on the grip facing out.

In the VERIFICATION ROOM: Will sits in the chair – good light, a liveness rig, the machinery he's used his whole career.

Nine years of being right about this machine. He puts his face to it.

It reads the polished model as authentic. It flags the live man as SYNTHETIC. The machine reads a number to the room. The number is confident.

INSERT - SCREEN

STATUS: SYNTHETIC · RETAINED FOR REFERENCE.

Behind him, a wall of numbered lockers. Most are tagged. Some have been cleared and not refilled – the ones the model no longer needs to check itself against.

One tag is readable. A first name and a version number: CAIRNS · v6.

An attendant peels a numbered tag from a sheet of them and reaches for Will's collar.

And Will – who has not fought any of this, who has been waiting for the error to clear because for nine years the errors have always cleared – finds the only thing he has.

WILL
Ask me something.

The attendant pauses, mildly.

WILL (CONT'D)
Ask me something only I'd know. I can prove it. Wonderland, grade twelve – my mother drove, and he was sick before the ride, which is worse, and she said "I know, sweetheart," like he wasn't in the car.

Silence. It is a good story. It is a true story. It is the only true thing in the building.

ATTENDANT
(not unkind, and this is the whole film)
I don't know who that is.

Of course she doesn't. The only man alive who could verify Will has a version number on a locker eleven feet behind him.

She clips the tag to his collar. Someone hands him a paper cup of water, the way you do at a clinic. He holds it. He doesn't drink it.

A hand guides him toward a door – a specimen the model keeps until it doesn't. On paper, he isn't here.

The DEAD SALES DEPARTMENT: John's laptop CHIMES. An incoming call.

He answers – and we see it before he does.

The poolside frame. The water. The light. The one we have now watched twice.

"WILL" fills it. Tanned. Easy. Glowing.

He is warm. He is specific. He knows about the bracket. He knows about hole 7. He knows about the putter.

WILL
Can't make it, buddy. I'm gutted.
But listen –

The pitch. Come down here. He'll set him up. There's a woman, Michelle – one fee, handles everything. By Friday.

John doesn't smile.

Behind the likeness, the water moves – not wrong exactly. Just not the way water moves.

Something crosses John's face. Not delight, not alarm. Something he can't place. The rhythm's a little off. The warmth's a shade too smooth.

For one second, he almost catches it.

WILL (CONT'D)
I love you, man.

A half-beat late.

The call ends. John sits alone in the half-dismantled floor, lit by the screen. The putter behind him.

He reaches for his phone.

He starts to type back.

He stops.

He sets the phone down on the carpet, screen up, still lit.

Alone, in the half-dark, he says it once, out loud, to the whole dead floor. To hole seven. To the mug. To the phone still lit on the carpet.

JOHN (CONT'D)

(quiet)

Prove it's you.

Nothing on the floor answers. That used to be the wrong answer.

It's the only right one left.

He picks up the putter. WILL, in marker, facing out. He doesn't put it down.

Hold on John.

CUT TO BLACK.

THE END